Instr. in phys. lab., State U. of I ., 1870-4; prof. physics, 1874-1914, and prof. emeritus since 1914, Washington Univ., St. Louis. In 1889 showed that positive or reversed photographic pictures could be best produced by development in the light instead of in the dark-room; has developed perfect pictures on the most sensitive plates with the developing bath fully exposed to direct sunlight. Has made an extensive study of the nature of electric discharge, and concludes that the positive discharge is an inflow of electricity from the negative terminal, that there is no positive current. This is essentially the one-fluid theory of Franklin. Has shown that daily and annual variations in the magnetic needle and magnetic storms are due to solar radiation, modified by the earth's shadow, cloud shadows, wind storms and rain.
